A pair, Paddy Fields and Fishing Outrigger Catamarans, On a Beach Near Colombo, Sri Lanka
signed, titled and inscribed manuscript labels to verso, oil on naval drill, 30cm x 44cm, [2]

"The artist was a White Russian refugee [...] who arrived, penniless, in Colombo about 1940 and was given a job as resident decorator in the Galle Face Hotel [which still operates under this name]. He painted 6 or so 'murals' on large sheets of brown paper [...] for the ball-room. He also painted, in oils, many scenes of Ceylon which are much prized by residents of the time. Being unable to get canvas for his painting, he managed to scrounge white naval drill from the Navy - on which these pictures are painted. He died, a relatively rich man, before the end of the war", indistinctly signed and inscribed manuscript labels to verso.
